Brown Rudnick Continues Strategic Expansion in Washington DC -- Office Relocates to Historic Homer Building

Boston, MA, October 10, 2007 -- Brown Rudnick, a premier international law firm, has moved its Washington DC office to the historic Homer building at 601 Thirteenth Street NW, Suite 600. The firm has taken the entire sixth floor in this landmark building. The move is the latest example of Brown Rudnick's continued expansion and strengthened profile in Washington. Since last year, the firm has more than doubled in size with professionals practicing across government relations, regulatory and commercial litigation, and corporate law.

Brown Rudnick opened its Washington DC office in the spring of 2004 with the additions of longtime Capitol Hill advocates, Michael Lewan and Doyce A. Boesch. Since then, the firm has attracted such high-profile government relations professionals as Ruth Ravitz Smith, James J. Bonham, and Henry "Buddy" Menn III. Brown Rudnick has also brought on some of DC's top litigation and corporate attorneys, including partners James I. Campbell, Catherine B. Gardner, Joy M. Leong, Jr. and Fred L. Levy.

According to Brown Rudnick's CEO Joseph F. Ryan, "When we opened our Washington office we focused on extending services to existing clients while building relationships with new clients for whom we could offer an exceptional range of legal and strategic services. Today, our relocation to larger space in the Homer Building underscores our success in achieving this goal. The new office footprint will support future growth and enhanced capacity as we continue to attract top talent in an increasingly competitive market."

Located in the heart of Washington D.C.'s historic business district, the Homer Building is one of the city's premier multi-tenant commercial office properties and a significant architectural landmark. Other notable tenants include: The Gates Foundation and ING Group.
